I didn't see anything pertaining to MidWest LAN War but, I would like to thank drupi and shane for having come out! I know how much it takes to come 3 hours to haul equipment out and then turn around going home. I appreciated your help tremendously.

Here is the video we produced from the event: MidWest LAN War 2007

I am sorry Gabe School and Work have consumed so much of my time right now. I am struggling to keep up with this last event to be organized by me + the sponsors.

ScimanAI has taken on so much already and is getting ready to take over alot more in the coming weeks.

MWLW rocked, I was more then happy to come out with all the gear and support the network and servers. Once everything stabilized we ran like champs all night. I can't speak for shane but this was a serious learning experience for him. This event was the most he has been involved with the actual network side of the event. I am glad he has chosen to take a more active role in what the network design is all about.

dood organizing it + doing sponsors + school + work = no sleep. rest of it is cheese man.

Where we need help and if you can drag them down here is how to run the console tournaments. We have no freaking clue how to do it. mbgaming handled it before now we are running solo.

Gabe i am glad you are willing to travel to help us, just like I am to come up there when ever u need us.
